¹Mac (. . . contracted to M', Mc) is a Gaelic prefix meaning 'son' and corresponds to son in Teutonic names; to Fitz in Norman-French names; and to Map, shortened to 'ap or 'p in Welsh names, according to George Fraser Black in 'The Surnames of Scotland', page 519. Many Gaelic names are translated phonetically into English to preserve the sound of the original. Thus Mac-an-t-Saoir is pronounced Mac-in-tire because the 's' is silent when it follows an-t. Scots and their descendants spell their names in various ways depending on family tradition or their own judgment.

ARMS OF MacINTYRE OF GLENOE An Interpretation

Introduction

By Order dated September 20, 1991, Sir Malcolm Innes of Edingight, the Lord Lyon, King of Arms, officially recognized and registered the arms of James Wallace MacIntyre of Glenoe, Chief of Clan MacIntyre. The arms so confirmed by the Lyon are those traditionally borne by the Chiefs of Clan MacIntyre with two exceptions, described below.

The "matriculation" or grant of arms by the Lord Lyon represented the culmination of the efforts of a lifetime by L.D. MacIntyre, founder of the Clan MacIntyre Association. Beginning in early adulthood, L.D. sought to locate the successor of the hereditary chiefs of Clan MacIntyre, to persuade the Chief to formally petition for recognition of his right to the chiefship and his ancestral arms and to convince the Lord Lyon to confirm the traditional arms. Those familiar with how formidable a task this ultimately proved are not surprised that it required more than a half-century to complete. Although L.D., in his capacity as Clan Commander, inspected and approved the final specifications for the arms, he died just a few days before a copy of the actual grant of arms arrived.

While a formal grant of arms includes a detailed description of the arms, it makes no attempt to explain the origin or significance of the various elements constituting the arms. Particularly with arms as old as those of MacIntyre of Glenoe, which are officially confirmed as having been in use for more than three hundred years, the original significance of many of the symbols on the arms is shrouded in the mists of time.

Although the origins of Clan MacIntyre have never been traced with certainty, there is a recurrent tradition linking MacIntyres to the MacDonalds or "Clan Donald". And it is indisputable that several of the emblems appearing in the Chief's coat of arms also feature in the arms of various branches of the MacDonalds, further reflecting a definite family relationship between the two clans.

Interpretation of the Arms

Colors: The two main colors of the arms, gold and red, constitute the Chief's "blazon" colors. These are the Chief's personal colors, somewhat in the way a school or athletic team has its own colors.

Motto: It is generally impossible to determine why a chief of antiquity adopted as his motto "Per Ardua", Latin for "Through Difficulty" or "Through Hardship". "Per Ardua" does, however, seem an especially appropriate motto for the chiefs of Clan MacIntyre. Although originally affiliated with Clan Donald, in later centuries the area in which the chiefs resided came under the influence of Clan Campbell. Trying to reconcile their conflicting loyalties to these two powerful highland adversaries most likely often proved a difficult challenge for the head of an independent, but small clan such as the MacIntyres. The Chief's motto should not be confused with his war cry, "Cruachan," the name of the dominant mountain peak in the region of Glenoe.

Crest: The clan crest is a "dexter" or right hand clenching a dagger. Among the more populous clans, a very similar design is used by MacAlister, MacKay and Shaw, although in each case a different motto is assigned. The crest encircled by a strap and buckle is the only insignia properly adopted by clan members. Note that there is no snowball on the end of the dagger. The dagger with snowball is the crest of MacIntyre of Camus-na-h-Erie, the head of a branch of the clan descended from a younger son of one of the chiefs.

Helmet: In Scottish heraldry, the helmet's design is dictated by the rank of the owner of the arms. Clan chiefs who are not members of the titled nobility (i.e., dukes, earls, etc) display a silver helmet facing to the side, with a closed visor. Chiefs entitled to supporters employ a "tilting" or jousting helmet, a particular style of helmet used by medieval knights of sufficient importance to be invited to participate in tournaments.

Supporters: The two white cows standing beside the shield are formally termed "supporters", as they figuratively hold up or "support" the shield. A grant of supporters is a mark of special honor and distinction. They are not routinely awarded, even to chiefs, but are reserved for members of the nobility and chiefs of the more prominent clans.

Previously, no supporters were exhibited on the arms of MacIntyre of Glencoe, but the Lord Lyon indicated that he would look favorably on a petition for supporters in this case. Two stags were originally requested in view of the MacIntyres' prior office as hereditary foresters of Lorne. The Lord Lyon, however, determined to award the white cows as an allusion to the (unsubstantiated) tradition that the MacIntyre chiefs held their land from the Campbells upon payment of a nominal rent of a white calf in winter and a snowball in midsummer.

The Shield: Eagles appear in the upper left and lower right quarters of the shield. In Scottish heraldry, eagles commonly appear on the arms of various branches of Clan Donald. The white circle on the chest of each eagle is the only alteration made by the Lord Lyon to the shield traditionally borne by the chiefs. It represents the snowball which, as previously mentioned, formed one component of the semi-annual rent.

The single-masted galley or "lymphad", which appears in the upper right quarter of the shield is an extremely common feature on arms of clans of western Scotland and appears in the arms of both Campbell and MacDonald, as well as the town of Oban, the principle city on "MacIntyre country". The galley may have originally symbolized the ship by which many of these clans migrated from the Hebrides to the mainland. The galley on the Chief's shield has several interesting features. Although the sail is furled, the oars are not in the water but are displayed on deck in an X-shaped cross, the cross of St. Andrew, patron of Scotland. Additionally, the mast is topped by a flaming beacon.

In the third quarter of the shield, at bottom left, appears a "sinister" or left hand grasping a form of cross known in heraldry as a "cross crosslet fitchee." As the arms illustrate, this cross had a pointed base so that it could be hammered into the ground, and originally would have been used to assemble the clan for religious services or important announcements. It may be that this symbol evolved into the blazing cross later employed by Highland leaders to rally the clans for combat.

Plant Badge: The supporters stand on a small green hill, known in heraldry as a "compartment". Interspersed among the grass are sprigs of white heather, described by the Chief's grant of arms as "being his proper plant badge of his Clan MacIntyre" (sic). Some authorities hold that it was neither crest badge nor tartan which facilitated recognition of kinsmen in past eras, but rather a slip of a particular plant worn in the hat. White heather is appropriately worn by all members of Clan MacIntyre; ladies may pin it to their clothing; while gentlemen wear it behind the crest pin on their caps.

Finally, there is one fundamental aspect of heraldry that absolutely must not be ignored: contrary to common belief, all coats of arms are personal property and belong to only a single individual in each generation. Therefore, these are not the arms of "MacIntyres" generally or even of the Clan MacIntyre Association. They are solely the arms of James Wallace MacIntyre and his successor chiefs. If displayed, they should always be identified as "Arms of the Chief of Clan MacIntyre" or "Arms of MacIntyre of Glencoe".

SCOTS & IRISH

Many Americans with colonial ancestry have Scotch and Irish heritage. A number of people have asked me for a clarification of the term Scotch-Irish.

The Scotch-Irish, or Scots-Irish, as some now prefer, is a term used mainly in the United States. In the British Isles, these people are referred to as Ulster Irish.

The Scots-Irish were originally from the Lowlands of Scotland. In the early 1600s, the English Crown, after years of trying to militarily subdue the Irish tribes, relocated some of the Lowland Scots on plantations in Ulster. After 100 years, in the years prior to 1717, there had been drought, as well as, political, religious and civil strife in Ireland. The plantation system in Ireland broke down and poverty was rampant.

Beginning in the early 1700s contracts for rental of plantations came due for renewal. Rents were raised to an unaffordable rate and many new Scottish people of Ireland were forced to move to the New World.

During 1717-1775, it is estimated that more than a quarter of million Scots-Irish people immigrated to North America. There were settlements in nearly all of the colonies. Most of them, however, settled in the back country of Pennsylvania, Virginia and the Carolinas and many, after a short stay in these colonies moved overland across Tennessee and south into lower Mississippi.

This leads us into the McIntyres, McCalls and Smiths of southern Mississippi.

THE MCINTYRE FAMILY

(BRANCHES THAT INCLUDE THE YOUNGS , THE JENNINGS, THE MCCALLS AND THE SMITHS.)

THE STUDY OF THESE FAMILIES HAS TAKEN OVER FOUR YEARS OF RESEARCH IN LIBRARIES, COUNTY COURTHOUSES, ENDLESS LETTERS AND MUCH TRAVEL. I HAVE NO REGRETS AS I HAVE ENJOYED EVERY MINUTE OF IT. I WOULD LIKE TO EXPRESS MY GRATITUDE AGAIN, TO THOSE LADIES OF MY FAMILY WHO GAVE ME ALL THE HELP IN THE WORLD IN ADDITION TO THEIR ENCOURAGEMENT TO CONTINUE WITH MY WORK.

MRS DOROTHY SOJOURNER OF NATCHEZ, MS.
MRS FANNIE LEE LEWIS OF BOGUE CHITTO, MS.
MRS PAULINE LOWERY OF MADISON, MS.
MRS GENEVIEVE GOODPASTURE OF VICTORIA, TX.

YOUR ENCOURAGEMENT WAS WHAT I NEEDED TO KEEP GOING. I CAN HEAR GENEVIEVE GOODPASTURE TILL THIS DAY SAYING " PROVE IT. "

NOW LETS GET ON WITH IT.

CELTS: WEBSTERS DICTIONARY DEFINES CELT---- A CELTIC SPEAKING PEOPLE: THE BRETONS, IRISH, WELSH AND THE HIGHLAND SCOTS. ALL ARE CELTS. THEY ARE ONE OF AN ANCIENT PEOPLES IN CENTRAL AND WESTERN EUROPE, REPUTEDLY TO INCLUDE THE GAULS AND BRITONS.

PICTS: PICTS HAD SETTLED IN NORTH BRITAN SECTION OF SCOTLAND CALLED CALDONIA, THEY ALSO BECAME KNOWN AS CALDONIANS. THE NAME PICTS WAS GIVEN THEM BECAUSE THEY PRICKED THEIR SKINS WITH DYES TO MAKE A TATOO LIKE PATTERN TO GIVE EACH HIS OWN SEPARATE IDENTITY.

SCOTS: MEMBERS OF A GALIC TRIBE THAT MIGRATED TO NORTH BRITAN IN THE 5 TH CENTURY A.D. HOWEVER AT EARLIER DATE IN THE LATE 300 A.D. A FIERCE BAND OF WARRIORS FROM NORTH IRELAND (AROUND THE ATRIUM AREA) CAME BY SEA TO ATTACK THE CUMBRIA SECTION AND PARTS OF SCOTLAND. THESE RAIDS WERE PLANNED TO CAPTURE MEN AND WOMEN TO BE USED AS SLAVES ALSO TAKING ANYTHING OF VALUE FOR GOOD MEASURE.

THE ROMAN SOLDIERS THAT WERE OCCUPYING BRITAN AT THE TIME GAVE THESE WARRIORS THE NAME OF " SCOTTI " (MEANING " RAIDERS ").

THESE " SCOTTI " WERE THE FIRST TO CHALLENGE THE PICTS FOR THEIR LANDS.

THIS IS A SHORT OUTLINE OF THE BEGINNINGS OF THE SCOTCH / IRISH AND MEANT TO SHOW HOW THEIR BEGINNINGS WERE SO CLOSELY RELATED. IT IS NO WONDER THAT THEY ARE OFTEN LUMPED TOGETHER AS SCOTCH-IRISH. THEIR CULTURAL BACKGROUNDS WERE VERY SIMILAR AND INTERMARRYING WAS READILY ACCEPTABLE. YOU CAN SEE THAT IRISH/GAELS (SCOTS) WERE THE SAME IN THE LATTER 300 S (A.D.).

PART OF OUR MCINTYRE CLANS CLAIM IRISH DECENT AND OTHER PARTS CLAIM SCOTTISH DECENT. AS I SEE IT NOW THEY ARE BOTH RIGHT, HOWEVER THE MCINTYRE CLAN OF TODAY DID IN FACT ORIGINATE IN SCOTLAND. TRADITION HAS IT THAT THE EARLY HOMELAND WAS ON THE ISLE OF SKYE AT SLEAT. A WELL KNOWN POET OF THE TIMES,

AILLIAN DALE OF GLENCO, WROTE

"MCINTYRES WERE BOLD, HARDY AND FLEET.
THO THEY LOST WHAT BELONGED TO THE CLAN WHILE IN SLEAT."

I INTERPET THIS TO MEAN THAT DUE TO THE CONSTANT RAIDS
BY THE VIKINGS ON THEIR FARMS, HOMES, THE LOSSES OF CATTLE, AND THEIR HOUSEHOLD GOODS FORCED THE MCINTYRES TO LEAVE THE ISLE
OF SKYE AND MOVE TO THE MAINLAND. THEY LOADED THEIR CATTLE
AND BELONGINGS ON A GALLEY AND SET SAIL FOR THE MAINLAND
SCOTTISH COAST.

ARRIVING IN A NORTHERN VALLEY CALLED GLEN NOE AT THE BASE OF BEN CRUACHAN MOUNTAIN, THEY PROSPERED HERE.
DOCUMENTS SHOW THAT THE MCINTYRE CLAN HAVE OCCUPIED GLEN NOE FOR OVER 1,000 YEARS. WHEN THEY BECAME ESTABLISHED IN THEIR NEW HOME THEY WERE UNDER THE PROTECTION OF THE VERY STRONG MC DONALD CLAN.

MCINTYRES HOWEVER LAY CLAIM TO THEIR OWN CHIEF (CLAN)
HERALDIC ARMS, PLAIDS, MOTTO (PER ARDUA--"THRU DIFFICULTY.") AND ARMORAL BEARINGS.

I HAVE NO PLANS TO WRITE A COMPLETE HISTORY OF THE MCINTYRE CLAN, FOR THIS HAS ALREADY BEEN DONE. I DO SUGGEST IF YOU WOULD LIKE TO KNOW MORE ABOUT THE BEGINNINGS OF THE MCINTYRES AND/OR SCOTLAND, IRELAND, AND THE BRITISH ISLES, THERE
ARE SOME WELL WRITTEN BOOKS ON THESE SUBJECTS. THE FOLLOWING ARE THE BEST I HAVE FOUND.

I WOULD LIKE TO ADD RIGHT HERE THAT IF YOU HAVE AN IDEA THAT THIS IS DRY AND TEDIOUS READING OF HISTORY, YOU ARE IN FOR A PLEASANT SURPRISE. YET IF YOU ARE A HISTORY BUFF AS I AM, YOU WILL FIND THESE BOOKS EXCITING AND FULL OF INTRESTING BITS OF INFORMATION THAT NORMALLY ELUDES THE GENEALOGY RESEARCHER IN

ALEXANDER MCINTIRE

The Tragic Death of a Great Frontiersman

Fellow Clan MacIntyre Members! Looking for an interesting story with intrigue, suspense, and relevance to our common MacIntyre heritage? Listen as I relate a few of the facts Ann and I were able to uncover as we became increasingly more interested in the tragic tale of Alexander McIntyre - brave frontiersman of the Miami Valley (and who, during our research, became "Uncle Alex").

One of the most valuable gifts left me by my Father was a great appreciation and love for reading. With his spirited encouragement, I tackled the trilogy of books by Allen Eckert dealing with the pioneering and settlement of America. It was in the most fascinating volume The Frontiersmen, depicting the earliest years of exploration, invasion, and white settlement of the beautiful Ohio Valley (as seen through the life of Simon Kenton, certainly one of America's greatest frontiersmen and heroes) that we first came upon the name of Alex McIntire, mentioned often and significantly throughout this particular volume. Our interest grew, increasingly; and led our family to three outdoor drama productions: TECUMSEH! (in Chillicothe, Ohio), BLUE JACKET (in Xenia, Ohio), and DANIEL BOONE (in Harrodsburg, Kentucky). In each of those "evening starlight plays" certain episodes in the life of Alex McIntyre were vividly portrayed. Finally Ann and I visited the historical and genealogical libraries at Maysville and Mason and Fleming Counties, Kentucky - counties of Alex McIntyre's first mention. Useful information found was often incomplete and fragmentary; occasionally conflicting; but hear a few of those recorded passages concerning our "Uncle Alex" that seem universally accepted. As the spelling of "McIntyre" varies from source to source, (and often within the same record), I will attempt to remain true to the original author's persuasion.

Alex McIntyre is first mentioned as a member of Capt Joseph Bowman's Company of frontier militia at Harrodsburg and the neighboring stations on a roster of volunteers January 24, 1778. As Alex's many land holdings were located nearer to and within the fort-settlement of Old Washington (Ky), be not misled - the pioneers banded together, forming and reforming companies of militia in response to threats of Indian depredation.

As most of the land area that now constitutes the State of Kentucky was considered part of Virginia, "Alexander McIntire" is listed July 28, 1789 as one of the earliest lot owners in Mason County, District Kentucke, Virginia.

Alexander MacIntyre, often refered to as "Ellick" or "Aleck" by his fellows on the frontier, was variously described as a man rather short in height, of strong and sturdy form, with hair so blazing red that it was to be a curiosity to his Indian-enemies and thusly was often referred to by Capt Simon Kenton and others as "red-haired Ellick". However, it was his skill with the long rifle in frequent skirmishes with the Indians that he was to be so well remembered by his companions on the American frontier. Numerous reports of Alex's superior marksmanship appear in their diaries and transcripts recorded by the historians of the period.

One particular incident along Eagle Creek in southernmost Ohio, frequently mentioned, seems to be his most renowned feat. It was one of the many demonstrations of shooting skill that were to earn Alex the admiration of his frontier friends and the hatred of his Indian-enemies.

Traveling with General Charles Scott and 230 other volunteers from Fort Washington, Kentucky, along the Ohio shore (of the Ohio River), Alexander McIntyre came upon the fresh trail of a small Indian raiding party. Colonel John Grant, eight of his men, along with five frontiersmen (including our Alex) took up the chase. Soon the whites were upon the Indian encampment. Five (3) Indians were around the campfire with a sixth seen a short distance away. This last Indian was known to the white men as Reelfoot, so called because of his two clubfeet. This find brought smiles to the mouths of the white men, for Old Reelfoot, a Shawnee subChief, was a dreaded warrior in Kentucky with many murdered and scalpless bodies left in his raids on white settlements. Just as Colonel Grant was about to order the attack, the Indians noticed the presence of the whites and hastily took to the forest at a quick run. "Alex McIntyre was the first to shoot and once again justified his fame as an excellent marksman. Though he was a hundred yards away on a moving horse at the time, the ball passed through Reelfoot's head and slammed him to the ground in a heap." (Also).... "dropped one with one of those hundred-yard shots with the long rifle that McIntire was so fond of making." They rushed in and killed the others.

Another engagement Snag Creek in 1791. tracking another Indian red men as they were across the river. When broke concealment and fired upon the Indians in the canoe and those on horseback.. "...two of the Indians were killed at once...the third badly wounded...all of the men of Kenton's group were excellent marksmen, particularly McIntire."

Many other skirmishes with the Indians are mentioned involving substantial loss of life on both sides, but the fateful day for Alexander McIntyre came on April 7, 1792.

Once again Alex found himself in service to Capt (some accounts list Kenton as Major and McIntyre as a Capt at this date) Kenton leaving his home in the Maysville-Washington area (Ky) on a search and destroy expedition across the river into Ohio. The Indians in recent years had lost their beloved and sacred hunting lands of "Can-tuck-ee" to the whites and now more fervently and fiercely were attempting to keep the whites on the Kentucky side of the river and away from their homelands in the Miami Valley.

Kenton's 24 men had, on a rainy night, encircled a large encampment of 100 Indians and were about to attack the sleeping warriors in three separate semi-circles. A three-pronged pincer movement that was to involve Alex McIntyre leading the right attacking wing. The plan was to execute a surprise attack about midnight, firing into the tents of the Indians and yelling loudly to mislead the Indians' estimation of their much smaller numbers. The attack was to come on a cloudy night with scant luminescence from the moon to betray the few frontiersmen and to effectively conceal their escape if need be. If retreat became necessary, the plan was, in effect, "every man for himself" and to flee the three or more days back to Maysville Station, Kentucky.

The plan of attack upon the slumbering natives might well have been a good one except for two critical errors -- the first in that one of the frontiersmen (Luther Calvin) fired prematurely, too anxious to await Kenton's signal -- the second....neither Kenton nor any of his Kentucky boys had been up against this "courageous brave with nerves of steel", Tecumseh. The shots and firing pattern of the attackers was staggered and sporadic and Tecumseh was not fooled for a minute. Rallying his braves quickly, Tecumseh burst from his tent and rushed into the center wing of the attackers, crushing the skull of Sam Barr with one fierce blow of his war club. The frontiersmen, realizing that the effectiveness of their rifle fire had been weak and unsuccessful. They scattered and fled into the darkness without their horses, taking different routes by foot on the long return to Maysville.

"Only one man angled back toward where the horses had been tied. Little red-headed Alex McIntyre had no intention of leaving that fine black stallion behind. As this whole expedition had turned out to be, it was a serious and fatal mistake."

Alex was unaware of the remarkably little damage inflicted by the rifles of his comrades upon the Indian force. Retrieving his prized black stallion he fled into the darkness and rode some fifteen miles before stopping near daybreak to build a small fire, certain that no Indians would follow his trail for such a distance on this miserable rainy night. But the Indians had taken up his trail soon after the aborted attack and were now creeping up on his campsite. Alex sensed their approach and took off running but the shortness of his stride allowed him to be overtaken. Surprised by the speed of the younger Shawnee, McIntyre turned to fire but did not get off a round, missing only by a fraction a bullet into the chest of Tecumseh himself. But it was not to be. Within seconds Tecumseh's knife was at his throat.

Following interrogation, with a small party of the continued their search for left behind.

Tecumseh was unprepared for the sight which met them upon their return to the point of McIntyre's capture.

McIntyre was tied to a tree and left Indians while Tecumseh and others more of Kenton's men or their horses

"From a pole stuck in the ground at the center of the trail, (Captain) Alex McIntyre's scalpless head stared sightlessly at them. On another pole close by his still-dripping heart was impaled. His arms and legs had been hacked off and his body cut in two just under the rib cage and these six grotesque pieces were hung with rawhide strips from tree limbs overhanging the trail."

"Tecumseh's gaze went one by one over the pieces and by the time he looked back at his men his expression had become one of great rage. "Cowards! Sparrows! Rabbits! You are not Shawnees! This is not courage! I am ashamed of you as my people! Ride behind me so I will not have to look upon you. I will not bear the company of cowards." It was at this point that the well-known incident occurs in which Tecumseh scolds his braves scornfully and severely, setting himself apart from many of his own rank and on the path to Chief of the entire Shawnee nation and last eastern Indian confederation.

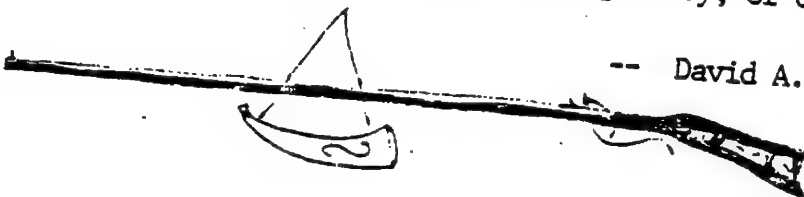

Such was life and death on the Ohio-Kentucky frontier in 1792.

Just a few last notes for those of you who have stayed with me this long.

1. Alex McIntyre is listed in DAR ancestor List Vol II as born circa 1740 and married Jane (?) . about 1765
2. Listed McIntire on plat maps as one of first Lot Owners in Washington, Mason County, Kentucky; owning Lots 63 & 64, 48 & 49, five acres each, which he purchased from Wood & Fox and from Simon Kenton.
3. Signed as petitioner to Commonwealth of Virginia to establish District of Kentucky as individual state on 19 September 1787.
4. Listed as one of Kenton's spies in History of Maysville, Kentucky.
5. Listed McIntyre as "killed" along with Sam Barr on expeditionary report of Captain Simon Kenton of April 13, 1792.
6. Listed McIntire in Mason County, Ky., deed abstracts 1789-1810 as dying intestate, having purchased land from Simon Kenton, and leaving children, John McIntire, Lydia McIntire, Benjamin McIntire, and Alexander McIntire.
7. Both outdoor drama BLUE JACKET in Xenia death of Alex his Indian braves productions of TECUMSEH! in Chillicothe and include portrayals of the famous torture and McIntyre, the frontiersman; and the rebuke of by Chief Tecumseh.
8. The capture, Tecumseh's source. However two capture, McIntyre's Indian who was (having been badly "privates" during the the whites) so enraged the speak. torture, and death of Alex McIntyre by braves varies little from source to accounts add that following his own derision and laughter at an experiencing great pain and agony wounded by gunfire in the ill-fated midnight ambush by Indians to..."carve him up"...so to
9. Most of the reports of Alex McIntyre's torture and death came from Indian braves captured in battles that followed, but much credence has particularly been given to the first-hand accounts of Coo-na-haw, intimate of Tecumseh, who was present at the return of Tecumseh to the site of McIntyre's killing. Coo-na-haw took the name of John Coon after the peace and settled close to his his white friend, Simon Kenton. Coo-na-haw's loyalties were divided during the days of conflict with the whites, but it was after the peace that he confirmed the stories Simon Kenton had heard of the fateful end of his close companion and friend, "Little Red-Haired Ellick".

And so ends our fragmentary account of the Frontiersman, Alexander McIntyre. Admittedly, our research has been amateurish, but an effort not without great interest, enthusiasm, and, to some degree, reverence. We would hope to find more information of the descendants of Alexander or possibly a clue to his parental tracings in an attempt to further flesh out the story of this Scottish pioneer. Obviously we would welcome any insights or information from others. In any development, or none at all; we have enjoyed immensely this conversation with the haunting images of the past, of those days gone by, of our "Uncle Alex".

THE LEGEND OF REELFOOT LAKE

BIRTH PLACE OF GENE SHAW MCINTYRE JR. #1

At the beginning of the 19th century this region was called Indian Country, and rightly so, for in the rich bottom lands dwelt a tribe of the Chickasaws, which camped at the base of the bluffs that rose 300 feet above the Mississippi, providing the lookout points so needed in a wilderness.

Legend says that at the time of our story a mighty chief ruled wisely, yet his heart was heavy, for his only son had been born with a deformed foot. As the boy grew up he developed normally, but his walk was different from all other Indians. He walked and ran with a rolling motion, so his people called him Kalopin, meaning Reelfoot.

When the old chief died, Reelfoot became chief. He, too, was sad and lonely, for as yet none of the Indian maidens had stirred in him the thoughts of love. His father had often recorded to him tales of the mighty tribes dwelling to the south, and of the wondrous beauty of their maidens. So, restless in spirit, when the robins arrived from the north seeking a mating ground, he likewise gathered a few of his chosen tribesmen and wandered south in quest of a princess.

Many days they journeyed. Finally their canoes, floating down the river, entered a domain having different tribal customs, and there were signs which told them that they were approaching the abode of a mighty chieftain.

Reelfoot sent runners forward to notify the great Choctaw chief, Copiah, that a friendly party approached. Soon the chief's councillor came forward to welcome the strangers to the council fire.

When the village was reached Reelfoot went forward to offer the requisite homage to Copiah, and then, continues the legend, he beheld his dream princess, more beautiful than he had ever dared imagine, sitting closely by the side of the chief, her father.

The old chief was stately and dignified, as all Indians are on such occasions, and after they had smoked the great peace pipe and eaten of the freshly killed game, he inquired of young Reelfoot the reason for his visit.

Reelfoot replied that he was on a pilgrimage to find a princess to rule his tribe with him, and that now he saw his heart's desire for the first time.

At this the old chief was filled with wrath, for he knew the beauty and entrancing charm of his only daughter, and what chief would want his daughter to marry on deformed, even though he be powerful.

So old Copiah told Reelfoot that his daughter was only to be given in wedlock to a Choctaw chieftain, and under no circumstances could she join a tribe which was so unfortunate as to have a clubfooted chieftain.

This made Reelfoot sick at heart, but he was more firmly resolved than ever to have this one Indian maiden. So he offered her father pearls and skins and other treasures which would arouse envy even in the greatest chieftain's heart. Then the old chief sent for the tribe's medicine man, who called publicly on the Great Spirit of all Indians.

The Great Spirit spoke to Reelfoot, saying that an Indian must not steal his wife from any neighboring tribe, for such was tribal law, and if he disobeyed and carried off the princess that he, the Great Spirit, would cause the earth to rock and the waters to swallow up his village and bury his people in a watery grave.

Reelfoot was frightened at this threat of dire punishment, and stifling his longings deep in his heart, sorrowfully turned his canoe toward the North Star and home.

Summer had come then the home country was reached, but to Reelfoot it lacked one thing-Laughing Eyes, forbidden to him by the Great Spirit. Through the long summer days the Indians fished and hunted, and Reelfoot as chief was doing his part in storing up food for the coming winter.

But his activities did not keep Reelfoot from thinking of his love and wondering if the Great Spirit would really do as he said.

For the first time Reelfoot did not want to believe the Great Spirit; so, as the days grew short and the maize was gathered, he planned with his warriors to go south and capture the forbidden maiden. When the first snows came they started, and, swooping down on the Choctaws, he captured the princess and fled back to the north.

Laughing Eyes was greatly frightened, for she had heard what the Great Spirit had said to Reelfoot. She feared for herself and implored that he send her back to her father; but Reelfoot was in love and, now that he possessed his longed-for bride, was willing to defy everything.

One starry night he brought his princess bride home, and there was great rejoicing among his people, for now their tribal family was complete. The festival fires burned; the pots boiled and the venison browned on the spit.

In the midst of the festival and the marriage rites the earth began to roll in rhythm with the kettledrums and tom-toms.

The Indians tried to flee to the hills, but the rocking earth made them reel and stagger. Chief Reelfoot and his bride reeled also and the Great Spirit stamped his foot in anger. The Father of Waters heard and, backing on his course, rushed over Reelfoot's country.

Where the Great Spirit stamped the earth the Mississippi formed a beautiful lake, in the bottom of which lay Reelfoot, his bride, and his people.

Such is the Indian legend of Reelfoot Lake.

REELFOOT LAKE HISTORY AND TRADITION

The northwestern corner of Tennessee where Reelfoot Lake lies, although the youngest section of the state as regards settlement and development, is nevertheless very rich in history and tradition.

If we begin with history, we find that it was not until 1785 that the white man spent any time in West Tennessee. It was then that Henry Rutherford and two companions from North Carolina arrived in the wilds to make some surveys, having travelled in keel boats down the Cumberland, Ohio and Mississippi rivers to the mouth of a small river entering the Mississippi from the east, called by the Chickasaws the Okeena. As they ascended this river the next morning, they were so much impressed with the native deer, whose queerly marked antlers were unlike any they had seen before, that they re-christened it the Forked Deer river. The explorers halted at the first bluffs and began their surveys. Here the initials H. R. cut in a sycamore tree established what is still known today as Key Corner, a point from which West Tennessee surveys have been started through the years. In June 1931 the Lauderdale County Court placed a bronze marker 60 feet east of the original site.

Three years later, in 1788, Henry Rutherford and James Carleton came into the section now known as Lake County. Here James Carleton made a survey called the "I. C. Line" because of the appearance of his initials as written in Old English. This line today marks the main (Church) street of Tiptonville.

Tennessee became a state in 1796; but West Tennessee was not then a part of the state, being still Indian country. It was not until 1818 that Andrew Jackson and Isaac Shelby inveigled the Chickasaws into signing a treaty by which this beautiful country was added to the domain of Tennessee. The price paid was $15,000 a year for 20 years, making the six million acres involved cost five cents per acre. The area bought was all that west of the Tennessee River from the Mississippi-Alabama line to the Ohio River. This was the "Jackson Purchase."

Reelfoot Lake came into existence between the time of the surveyors' entrance to the section and that of the Jackson Purchase. Henry Carleton and James Rutherford came into northwest Tennessee on the Reelfoot River. That river now is included in the lake where it can clearly be seen because of the fact that no trees nor stumps lie in its channel.

According to the Indian legend, Reelfoot, a chieftan of the Chickasaws, in the course of his wanderings, met and fell violently in love with Starlight, princess of the Choctaws. Forbidden by her father to marry her, he and his braves stole her. After the return home, as they celebrated the success of the venture, the earth opened up and swallowed the whole tribe as an indication of the wrath of the gods.

This legend, as is the way of legends, has its weak points. Students of the Chickasaw language tell us that Reelfoot is not an Indian name. We find also that very few Indians lived in this section at that time, it being reserved as a hunting ground through which they passed from time to time.

History is more reliable. It states that Reelfoot Lake was formed during the earthquakes of 1811-12. Although these earthquakes occurred at a period in the nation's history when the whole Mississippi valley north of Louisiana was virgin forest, and when only a few settlements of white men existed in this region, including the Spanish and French village of New Madrid now in Missouri, fortunately there were a number of scientists and men of education in and near the region during the period of disturbance who have given vivid pictures of their experiences.

Firmin La Roche, master of a fleet of flat boats operating between St. Louis and New Orleans, recorded that on the evening of November 15, 1811 he tied up his boats eight miles above New Madrid. Awakened in the night by a crash, he found his boats carried more than a mile upstream by a great wave which came up the river. The water rose so rapidly that trees on the thirty foot bank were covered.

Mrs. Eliza Bryan of New Madrid, in a letter to Rev. Lorenzo Dow, an itinerant Methodist preacher who was anxious to learn what had occurred, said that beginning December 16, 1811 there were violent earthquakes in that section throughout the winter months. On some days the atmosphere was so completely saturated with sulphurous vapors as to cause total darkness; trees cracked and fell into the roaring Mississippi, and on some occasions the current was retrograde for a few minutes supposedly due to an eruption in the river bed. The climax came on February 7, 1812 with the hardest shock of all when the waters of the river gathered up like a mountain, rising fifteen to twenty feet perpendicularly and then receding within its banks with such violence that it took with it whole groves of young cottonwoods which edged its borders. Fissures in the earth vomited forth sand and water, some closing again immediately.

Mrs. Bryan's most noteworthy statement was to the effect that she heard it reported that a lake had been formed on the opposite side of the river in the Indian country; that this lake communicated with the river at both ends, making current the conjecture that within a few years the whole of the Mississippi would pass that way.

Vincent Nolte, a merchant on his way from New York to New Orleans, as he rode horseback over the Alleghany mountains to Pittsburgh fell in with another traveller who happened to be the distinguished naturalist, Audobon. They purchased two flat boats on which they started down the Ohio River in January 1812. The weather was so cold that the river froze over, forcing them to leave their boats in the ice, and to ride through the vast forest. They passed through Lexington and Frankfort. When near Louisville, they felt the first earthquake shocks which broke the ice in the river, allowing their boats to come down. Boarding their boats again at Louisville, they reached New Madrid by February 6 on a clear, moonlight night. Awakened by fearful crashes, they saw the Mississippi boiling up like water in a boiling cauldron. The stream flowed rushing back, while the forest trees came cracking and thundering down. As they traveled on to Natchez and New Orleans, they learned that this earthquake had shaken all Louisiana and the whole region around the Gulf of Mexico as far south as Caracas where forty thousand inhabitants were swallowed up.

Today Reelfoot Lake is a magnet which draws tourists from every section of the nation to Lake County, the county which has the highest percentage of tillable land of any county in the state; whose farm lands are assessed higher than any other farm lands in the state; the only county in the state which grows alfalfa in any appreciable quantity; the county which produces more cotton per capita than any other county in the United States, turning out approximately three bales for every man, woman, and child. This is the county which differs from all others in that there cannot be found within its borders a native rock, a hill, nor a running rill.

Here lies the beauty spot, Reelfoot Lake which has attracted nation-wide admiration — a land of delight for the naturalist, the angler and the hunter.

REELFOOT - AN EARTHQUAKE LAKE

Reelfoot Lake is a by-product of the "New Madrid Earthquakes", a series of 1,874 recorded tremors centered generally about 70 miles southwest of the Lake, taking place from December 16, 1811 until March 8, 1812. The "hard shock" came at 3 A.M. Friday, February 7, 1812. These shocks could be felt over an area of one million square miles from Canada to the eastern seaboard and New Orleans. Witnesses reported that the earth and the river were torn with furious convulsions. During the quakes, ground waves near the epicenter moved a foot to and fro creating sunken lands, fissures, landslides and land domes. Sand blows erupted belching hot water, mud, fumes, coal and carbonized wood. These explosions coupled with the crashing of timbers, falling of banks along the river and the cries of frightened wildfowl created a terrible rumbling and roar. The air smelled of sulphur and the sky was usually dark and dreary.

When the savage tremors subsided, Reelfoot Lake was born and thirty to fifty thousand square miles of land had undergone vast topographical changes most of which are visible today. Although these were among the most powerful shocks to strike North America within historic times, few lives were lost as the area was sparsely settled. Powerful earthquakes occurred here before 1811 and are now estimated to occur at intervals of about 600 years.
